

MULBERRY

KITCHENS

For over 50 years we've been designing and installing kitchens of the highest quality, in Norfolk, Suffolk and beyond.

We began as a family building company in the 1970s, and quickly gained a reputation as a trustworthy company that had an eye for detail and a knack for innovation.

Our talent for creating high quality kitchens became clear, and we opened our first kitchen showroom in 1997.

Over the next 10 years this grew into our main business which is the Mulberry Kitchens you see today. We still have our building expertise, we're still the same trustworthy company, but focused exclusively on creating great kitchens for our clients.

MULBERRY

a reputation built over half a century

So we can do the best job possible, we always get to know you and find out about you - what your dream kitchen looks like, how you'll use it, the space you've got and anything else that will help us create the ideal kitchen, only for you. Then, once we've got everything, we'll work out the most efficient and effective way to turn it into reality.

Our family business set out with one goal – to give people their ideal kitchens.

Over five decades later we're still doing it, in homes across Norfolk, Suffolk and further afield.

We have the expertise to create beautiful kitchens in any style and any shape. Our team of highly skilled designers and installers put heart and soul into every job we do, to create kitchens that are exactly what you're looking for.

Because if you're thrilled, so are we!

our process

putting you at the centre

A great kitchen is all about the person, so we always begin by sitting down for a chat over a tea or coffee, to learn about you. We'll talk about how you use your current kitchen, and what you want from your new one. What styles? What colours? How will you use it? We'll even cover your height and how you like to cook and clean.

design for your life

Once we have a comprehensive understanding of what you want your kitchen to be, the space you have, and how you will use it, we'll create a number of designs for you that fit the brief. We'll advise you on the colours, materials and appliances that work best for you, making sure the decision making process is divided into small chunks, rather than an overwhelming whole.

from the page to your home

When you've made your choice, Robert and our expert designers will work with you for the next stage. Whether you are looking for a design and supply only service or the total package, the next step is a full technical survey. From this we can organise and supervise an all inclusive package, or liaise with your own builders, project managers and tradesmen.

start to finish - and beyond

At the end of the project we closely inspect the work, and only when we are completely satisfied will we sign it off. We then give you a package which explains how to care for and clean your new kitchen, so you can make sure it stays in tip top condition for many years to come.

If you need any support in the future, our warranty covers you for any enquiries you have, whether it's about fixtures, fittings, appliances or something else.

Bella loves to have family over for brunch

When Bella set out to build her new home, she knew she wanted her kitchen to be different. Nothing off the shelf, it had to be bespoke, to reflect her funky style.

This was definitely something we could get behind!

Bella came to us through family connections - we'd installed kitchens for her mother and her brother, so she knew the skills and service we would bring. We spent a lot of time with her, exploring her options and the colour choices available. Once settled on a design, we set to work installing the kitchen in her new house.

The end result is a statement-making kitchen with a large central island that has a strong pastel palette with brass accents, marble textures, and quirky, personal styling touches. Two rectangular skylights let natural light pour in over the island, while the striking marble splashback and worktops add a touch of luxury.

It all adds up to a bold and beautiful space that works perfectly for her and her family.

Stephen and Victoria are the ultimate hosts

Stephen and Victoria had been looking for the right kitchen for over a year before they came to us following a friend's recommendation. Until then, nothing had hit the mark, but they were excited by our design, including the bold choice of colour and our custom designed overhead planter.

Our building and interior architectural design expertise was the other deciding factor. Before designing the kitchen, we redesigned the space including all the necessary structural calculations.

We undertook all the building work, and organised the required building control inspections and certification. We also installed underfloor heating and tiled the floor before installing the kitchen and later decorating on completion.

It was a completely project managed process from start to finish, all undertaken by our true professionals.

The mix of black metalwork, warm oak, and trailing plants creates a distinctive feel, and there's plenty of room for them to host friends as they love to do.

Pippa & David bring together minimalism and traditional Pippa and David came to us with two distinct visions - clean lines, minimalist cabinetry and contemporary finishes, the other sought the warmth of traditional details, such as rich textures, classic fixtures and a welcoming ambiance. This was a challenge that really let us exercise our creativity!

Our design is a harmonious blend of both - we've included streamlined surfaces that are softened by natural materials, and made design choices that fit both perspectives. This is a kitchen where modern efficiency meets traditional comfort - it's inviting, practical and deeply personal all at once.

By working closely with the client's builders, we've been able to create a kitchen where modern efficiency meets traditional comfort - it's inviting, practical and deeply personal all at once.

Sophia wanted to combine the old with the new

This kitchen was to be the centrepiece of a beautifully renovated 200-year-old barn.

Sophia envisioned a sociable space that had an industrial edge and a minimalist, dark-toned aesthetic. We could see the original architectural features lent authenticity and rustic warmth, so we built on this, grounding the space in its heritage.

At the heart of our design we used fluted oak wood panelling paired with a sleek black glass unit to create a bold focal wall, one that balanced texture and depth with simplicity. Clean lines and a dark colour palette are elevated by the natural wood accents and subtle contrasts, to offer a sense of calm and cohesion.

The result is a kitchen that feels both lived-in and traditional, where every detail is purposeful and every surface tells a story.

inspired by Penny's love for the 1950s

Radicchio red cabinetry with bronze handles grounds the room in warmth and character, while crisp white surfaces and herringbone wood flooring strike a graceful balance of contrast and calm.

Painterly floral wallpaper unfurls across the walls, softening the lines with nostalgic charm. Nearby, a 1950s-style sliding wall unit with reeded glass glows with vintage elegance, offering both texture and transparency.

Even the splashback, with its scalloped silhouette, adds a playful note – a quiet flourish that echoes the curves of the bespoke wooden table, with built in wine cooler, which we designed to sit at the heart of the room like an open invitation: to gather, to celebrate, to linger.

More than a place to cook, this is a living canvas of memory and meaning, where timeless design meets personal flair and heartfelt connection.

Sarah's space to relax and unwind at the weekend

Sarah had been inspired by a visit to the Ivy in London, so we drew on the sophisticated styling of this venue in our design process.

With subtle brasserie influences, this kitchen blends classic charm with a touch of glamour. The rich dark green cabinetry gives it depth and character, while the classic shaker doors and antique brass hardware add a refined, heritage feel.

We've designed every drawer and cupboard to keep the space practical and clutter free, from bespoke spice racks to the hidden recycling bins. Nestled beneath a large window, a built-in window seat offers a peaceful nook for reading, relaxing, or simply gazing out at the garden.

Emily and David's slow mornings in a calming space

We first met Emily and David when a home renovation gave them the chance to create a new kitchen, utility and boot room.

From the very beginning, we took the time to understand how they wanted their new space to feel and how they live day to day. It soon became clear that they wanted the three rooms to complement one another and sit naturally within the character of the property, with quality being a top priority.

The result is a light, elegant kitchen that blends classic shaker style cabinetry in Farrow & Ball Old White with modern touches, including a dark contrasting island in Railings and softly lit fluted glazed cabinets.

It's a beautiful space in a beautiful property.

Olivia and Tom wanted to bring the outside in

When Olivia and Tom came to us, they brought with them a clear vision: they wanted a kitchen that felt less like a traditional cooking space and more like a relaxed, welcoming bar. It needed to be a place where they could unwind, connect and entertain with ease.

This design captures that beautifully. The inviting curved seating area creates a natural hub, encouraging conversation and togetherness – the kind of space that draws people in and becomes the heart of the home. Above the island is our custom designed overhead planter, brimming with greenery, which brings a breath of fresh air, softening the industrial edge and adding a laid-back, organic vibe.

Taylor's vibrant space for bringing everyone together

In this kitchen there's a place for everything and everything is in its place. When she reimagined the family home, Taylor dreamed of a space that would bring everyone together, it would be a vibrant, functional hub where everyone could gather, connect and feel at home.

A striking Farrow & Ball Rangwali pink island is the centrepiece here, bringing plenty of playful energy to the room. It offers generous preparation space and seating, making it perfect for everything from morning coffee to evening entertaining.

Functionality is extremely important, and we've thoughtfully designed every bespoke cupboard and drawer, from deep pan drawers to hidden spice racks, to ensure the space works beautifully for everyday living and those shared family moments.

Mary needed a new kitchen to love

Mary and Richard loved the kitchen they'd had for over 25 years, and didn't want to change it, but their new extension was reinventing the space. Having had their previous kitchen for so long, they understood the importance of quality, so came to us for their new one.

We worked with them to find something that would connect the old and new in a complementary way. It is a busy farmhouse kitchen, so it had to be practical and functional. With the extension it also meant the kitchen is now in the middle of the house so light needed to be considered too – we chose all the materials and colours with this in mind.

We designed, installed and hand painted the kitchen and utility room, creating a light, calm and airy space that flows beautifully with the new extension. It leans into a warm, traditional cottage aesthetic - soft pale blue cabinetry, darker tile accents, and rustic wood furnishings - it's stylish, functional and timeless.

Eve needed a space to relax, work and host

Eve came to us because her current kitchen wasn't working for the family. She wanted to have a wall of pinstripe oak with accents of green, and a table which worked with the island.

We listened carefully and factored all these points into our design, which included moving the hob onto the island, and creating a bespoke table using old structural timbers from the barn.

The end result is this really striking mix of rustic and modern-industrial styling. Exposed brick and reclaimed textures combine with contemporary green cabinetry, ribbed oak joinery and brass accents for a chic, characterful look.

Our new design has transformed the room into a space where they now spend all their time; working, eating, entertaining, relaxing. It really has become the heart of the home.

Rushmere

the heart of Marnie's family home

By working closely with Marnie and her family, we created this beautiful kitchen that sits at the heart of this stunning barn conversion.

When we met Marnie and her family in our showroom - they knew they wanted quality, and fell in love with one of the kitchens we have on display. But it was our design expertise that gave them the confidence that we would create something really special.

The design of the kitchen had to be carefully created to enhance the beauty of the beams, to make the kitchen feel like a part of the barn.

The result is a wonderful traditional kitchen; the gorgeous green Aga, truly artisan herringbone tile and timber beams really creates a kitchen that works for generations to come.
